

The Department of Statistics at the University of Virginia invites applicants for a non-tenure track Lecturer and Instructor position. We seek candidates dedicated to our mission of excellence, attracted to our President's "Big Data" initiative, and passionate about teaching in a world-class institution.

Candidates will be expected to teach at the graduate and undergraduate levels and provide service to the University, Department and professional organizations. The anticipated appointment start date is July 25, 2017.

The Department of Statistics at the University of Virginia was established in 1989 and currently has 12 faculty members. The Department works closely with the Biostatistics Department at the University Medical School, Quantitative Collaborative and other departments on campus. Faculty interests range from theoretical to applied statistics (including statistics in the social, medical, and forensic sciences) and we supervise a growing number of students at all levels. The department offers the Bachelor of Arts, Masters of Science and PhD degrees. The University strategic plan emphasizes computational science and large-scale data analysis. Centrally located in Virginia, Charlottesville boasts a thriving cultural life, with easy access to recreational venues and convenient travel to Richmond, Washington D.C. and SAMSI, which combine to make UVa a most desirable place to live and work.

Qualifications

Applicants must be on track to receive a Ph.D. in Statistics or a related field by May 2017 and must hold a Ph.D. at the time of appointment.

Application Instructions

Review of applications will begin November 28, 2016; candidates who apply by then will be given full consideration, but position(s) will remain open until filled.
